

February Update: Spring Blooms Early

Fellow gardeners, landscapers, and plant lovers:

Spring is a time of renewal. At the nursery, consistent rain and moderate temps have us looking forward to Spring. Many of the plants in the nursery are budding or already blooming, while others in their dormant states are busy working underground, preparing for the warmer Spring days to come.

We are busy making everything ready for that Spring push of growth, focusing all that energy for the robust, dynamic explosion of plants. Roses are starting to wake up, peonies are peeking up out of the ground, and hostas are starting to emerge from their hibernation. Buds are swelling everywhere. Plum trees, hydrangeas, red buds, and magnolias are so close to the breaking-open point; not to mention the many dormant perennials and deciduous shrubs and trees that are starting to spring forth with new growth.

And of course there's all the tried and trues around the nursery that have held up well through the frost and the cold; and the backbones of the year round garden, such as the succulents and the cacti. And then there's these little surprises - the plethora of dormant perennials, shrubs, vines and trees that are just getting ready to dazzle us for the many months to come. How can you single out just one plant to feature this time of year?

What are you looking forward to planting this Spring? Give us a call for recommendations or to discuss orders or quotes. We are always happy to serve your plant and landscaping needs.

Thank you,

Robert

TOOLS AND TIPS:

CALSCAPE REVIEW

by Jackie Scheidlinger

Let me introduce you to Calscape—a very useful addition to your toolbox. Managed by the non-profit organization California Native Plant Society (CNPS), this website provides you with the data to help you and your clients to understand which California native plants will thrive in your geographic region. [...] They use that data to create maps and a searchable database for locating the plants that are native to your specific region, and that attract the butterflies, moths, and other pollinators that feed upon those plants. They also list all the nurseries where you can purchase these plants or their seeds.
