January Newsletter

What are your plant-related resolutions for 2022? Maybe you're hoping to improve your landscape designs, gain more clients, grow a bigger and better garden, improve your botanical knowledge through web-based courses, or finally find a reliable source for those hard-to-find plants.

Whatever your goals, we are here to help. At the nursery, we're flying through the winter season busier than ever: every week we're getting in new shipments, while working hard to protect our beautiful stock through the cold and rainy winter.

For this month's newsletter, we're hoping to brighten your inbox with some beautiful photos of new plants, helpful tips for your January gardening, and resources for education and professional development heading into the first few months of 2022.

Is there anything you want to see in our newsletters this year? Please share your thoughts with us - we are always so interested to hear from our readers and would love to know what you'd like to see more (or less!) of each month.

Wishing you a peaceful and vibrant year to come -

Thank you,
Jane

Nursery News

Your January garden doesn't need to be drab and lifeless - there are so many options to keep your plantings looking fresh, vibrant, and full of color and texture through the Winter months. Many succulents are turning vivid shades of red and orange, some perennials are flowering, and we are getting in new shipments of native plants every month. Not sure where to start? Check out some of our favorite winter plant varieties below:

Euphorbia martini
'Tiny Tim'

- Striking foliage
- Dwarf evergreen subshrub
- Grows up to 12" tall and wide

Kalanchoe orgyalis 'Copper Spoons'

- Unique, fuzzy texture
- Interesting copper and silver coloration
- Year-round interest
- Evergreen succulent
- Prefers full sun
- Hardy to 20 degrees

Opuntia violacea 'Santa-Rita Tubac Prickly Pear'

- Dramatic foliage colors
- Year-round interest
- Edible pads and fruits
- Red-yellow flowers in spring
- Tolerant of poor soils
- Prefers full sun
- Hardy to 10 degrees

Euphorbia 'Sticks on Fire'

- Evergreen succulent
- Fantastic green-red foliage
- Resembles sea coral with pencil thin branches

- Salt tolerant
- Deer and rabbit resistant
- Grows 4-8 ft tall and wide
- Hardy to 30 degrees

Garden & Landscaping

Winter gardening can be challenging - heavy wet soils, cold temperatures, and the explosion of weeds in the garden can all be tricky to navigate without some help. Luckily, UC Master Gardeners provide a handy checklist for keeping your Santa Clara County garden happy and healthy. Click on the link below to read their helpful January Garden Tips:
