September Update

We all are an integral part of our community, country, and world... what affects one of us concerns us all. We are currently witnessing an unprecedented time of upheaval and change, from COVID, to protests against race-based violence, to the fires that have burned thousands of acres of our beloved state of California.

As business owners, we have a responsibility to lead by example. Diversity, non-violence, and inclusion are but a few areas where we can help make a difference. Whether we are working with employees, clients, or suppliers, we have the opportunity and responsibility to take a stand for the rights of us all. We all had to work hard to get where we are, and now is the time to give back and work together.

We can make a difference and do our part to put an end to race-based violence. Please consider using your voice to call out bias and to support organizations that focus on equality.

With best wishes for a brighter future,
Robert

September Featured Plants

Asplenium bulbiferum

As Summer draws to a close, you may be considering how to add some character to your or your clients' shade gardens. Consider Asplenium bulbiferum, "Mother fern," whose name comes from the plantlets that form on the ends of the fronds. Click on the photo to learn more about Mother fern on our instagram page.

Hydrangea macrophylla

Heartleaf brunnera

"Jack Frost" Heartleaf brunnera is a stunning variety with small blue flowers that looks great in an Autumn landscape. Heat tolerant for the final dog days of Summer, this is another lovely choice for a shade garden. Click on the photo to learn more about "Jack Frost" on our instagram page.

Late summer is time to think about pruning roses. Roses respond best to regular pruning each year. We prune our repeat-flowering roses (also called everblooming roses or remontant roses) based on the timing of the two major flowering periods that occur each year. The first major flowering season occurs in late spring to early summer, and the second occurs in fall (roses do bloom in summer, but the number and quality of the flowers are reduced). The first pruning, done in late January or early February, prepares rose bushes for the late-spring to early summer blooming. The second pruning is done in late August to early September and ensures shapely bushes with lots of flowers in the fall blooming season. Pruning helps control the size of rose bushes and stimulates fresh, vigorous growth that improves flowering. Read More
